President's Welcome

Greetings CCIL Friends and Members,

Welcome to this year's CCIL Conference. As you can see, we have a huge offering of international law topics to educate and interest you over the three full days of our conference. Thanks to all of you: sponsors, speakers, volunteers and participants. You have made this conference possible, and you will, I am sure, make it a success. A special thanks to our co-chairs Raphaëlle and Annie and the CCIL office manager, Marianne (and the rest of the Intertask team), as they did the majority of the substantive and logistical organization.

I hope you have an enjoyable time at the sessions and in the halls and meals catching up with old friends and colleagues and making new ones. I also hope you will think of ways to improve the conference and share those ideas in the survey we will circulate electronically afterwards.

I also take this opportunity to emphasize that the CCIL is not just about our great annual conference. We award scholarships: the long-standing Humphries and the more recent Leslie Green (first awarded this year, and still looking for donations to allow it to continue). We organize alone or in cooperation with other organizations conferences, workshops, and speeches, including this past year about half a dozen events, mostly outside Ottawa. We have launched a regular publication and our website and social media presence is more active than ever with announcements, pod casts, and more. With your support and involvement we hope to build on what we have done to date. If you have ideas you are interested in pursuing or just want to get involved, please contact me, our office (manager@ccil-ccdi.ca), or a Board Member.

I look forward to meeting and hearing from you at this conference and in the years to come.

Co-Chairs' Welcome

While Article 38 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice has codified the traditional sources of international law, new actors on the global stage, their activities and resulting norms today appear to be redefining, at least in part, international law. Indeed, actors such as international organizations whose membership is not limited to States, or instruments such as voluntary codes of corporate conduct by corporations or human rights guidance developed by non-governmental organizations, now benefit from legal recognition. This year's conference therefore aims to examine the evolution of international law sources and their conception by scholars and legal practitioners in 2013 in various fields of international law, including the law of the sea, human rights law, humanitarian law, environmental law and business law.

We are very pleased to welcome all of the distinguished speakers who have accepted to participate in this year's Conference and share their knowledge and insight over the course of the next few days. We trust that participants to the conference will also contribute to the dialogue that will certainly be generated by panel discussions. We thank you again for participating in the 2013 edition of the CCIL Annual Conference.

Raphaëlle Lapierre-Houssian
Annie Lespérance
Conference Co-chairs
